

Nursing Master's Degree (Second Cycle) Program Outcomes

1. Develop and deepen knowledge in nursing field to the proficiency level based on Bachelor level qualifications and direct this knowledge with a critical approach
2. Conceive the interdisciplinary interaction which the nursing is related with and by using this knowledge formulate new knowledge and theories
3. Analyze and design a system, process, apparatus, and product to meet the advanced requirements related to the field.
4. Independently conduct studies that require proficiency and demonstrate leadership to solve problems related to the field in health area, one of the health industry and in patients care.
5. Transfer the current developments in the area of food engineering and her/his own work systematically in written, oral and visual forms.
6. Ability to communicate orally and in written by using at least one foreign language.
7. Use advanced informatics and communication technology skills with software knowledge required by the field
8. Take into consideration the cultural, scientific, and ethic values while health area and patients care data gathering, interpretation, implementation and announcement stages.
9. Develop strategy and implementation plans on the issues related to nursing area assess the findings within the frame of quality processes.