

Program Outcomes

To be able to produce original analysis methods and approaches, equipped with knowledge, thought and virtue, sensitive to the administrative-political and economic problems of the local, regional, national and international society, in the field of Political Science and International Relations and generally in the field of Social Sciences.

Acquiring the intellectual equipment that will enable them to analyze the problems and data they encounter in a methodological and analytical discipline, equipped with knowledge in fields such as world politics, organizational structures, political history and political systems in the globalizing competitive environment.

To have broad and analytical knowledge about the historical and legal framework of the international system, the internal structures of the states constituting the basic units of the system and their relations with each other, the role of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in interstate politics, and the policies that Turkey follows or may pursue in such a structure.

In parallel with the changes in the international environment and the academic development of the discipline, to constantly renew its program, to produce national and international publications and projects, to include experts and young academics in the social life as members of the information society.

To increase their professional knowledge about the International Relations Discipline.

To prepare an academic career infrastructure in different branches of social and managerial sciences, especially political science and international relations, for those who want to work as experts or managers in various fields of politics, civil society, public administration and the market.

Gaining the ability to conduct research, produce information and projects in order to solve the problems faced by institutions and organizations in the public sector, civil society and different fields of politics and contribute to their restructuring.